[Comparative study of the ultrastructure of the endometrium in women with and without oestrogen-induced asymptomatic ovarian hyperstimulation (author's transl)]. A comparative ultrastructural study was performed on biopsies of the endometrium obtained from 10 women with no endometrial abnormality before induction of ovulation by clomiphene citrate (CC) alone, 15 women with ovarian hyperstimulation without spontaneous ovulation, and 10 women undergoing CC induction of ovulation as outpatients and who then conceived. The endometrial epithelium of the ovulating women was almost completely transformed into polygonal cells. Both secretory and basal cells were present and secretory vesicles were observed. The cells of the glands showed no specific differences from those of the proliferative phase. In some cases, the basal epithelial cells were more deeply located in the lumen of the gland. There were no findings of endometrial secretory activity in the ovulating women. Electrical connector assemblies of the type comprising a housing and a socket are well known. The housing is usually of metal and is provided with a lock for retaining the socket in the housing. When using a connector of this type it is desirable to be able to retract the socket from its in-use position in the housing, e.g. in order to check the electrical connection between the contact terminals of the socket and their mating terminals on a device to which the socket is to be connected. However, the lock is so dimensioned that it cannot be moved fully from the locked to the unlocked position, and accordingly, if it is required to retract the socket from its in-use position, it is necessary to use some tool to release the lock. This invention seeks to provide an electrical connector assembly of the type described above in which the socket may be retracted from its in-use position, even though the lock is so dimensioned that it is prevented from moving to the fully unlocked position. The present invention relates to a method of and a device for cutting off thermally highly stressed areas of a heated article of commerce, particularly, a metal heat exchanger, such as a radiator, from its metal component, and particularly its core, a radiator core, having an inlet duct formed in the housing of the radiator and an outlet duct, having a cutting device for cutting off the thermally highly stressed areas from the core is described in Federal Republic of Germany published patent application No. DE-OS 37
