I have a table containing some simple data in SQL Server. I want to have some different queries (different method) for reading a particular column of the table. For example: create table tb (id int, column1 varchar(10), column2 varchar(10)) insert into tb (id, column1, column2) values (1, '1', '1') insert into tb (id, column1, column2) values (2, '2', '2') Method 1: select id from tb Method 2: select column1 from tb Method 3: select column2 from tb A: Yes, you can do it. Just create an auxiliary view: create view YourTableView as select id, column1, column2 from YourTable; Your all queries on YourTableView will be faster, since SQL Server does not have to build data needed for queries and show the data just to make them. A: You can "dummy" out the column you don't want: SELECT id, dummyColumn FROM tb Or, you can create an "alias" of the table, and use it for the dummy column: SELECT id, dummy AS col1 FROM tb If you "protect" the column you really want from yourself using an "alias", you can do something like this: SELECT id FROM (SELECT id, column2 FROM tb) AS dummy WHERE dummy.column2 = 'your code' Q: What kind of tags should I use in my repository I know that this is a very common question and I would like to find a solution without creating a book. I would like to know how to divide the tables in my application, usually I create three kinds of tables: Tables with read only properties Tables with read lcb139a0ed
