Effect of volatile anesthetics on the suppression of ventricular tachycardia induced by transient myocardial ischemia in dogs. To examine the effect of volatile anesthetics on the suppression of ventricular tachycardia induced by transient coronary artery occlusion, 10 dogs were treated under intravenous general anesthesia with sevoflurane or isoflurane during selective coronary arteriography. After occlusion of the proximal left anterior descending coronary artery, an induction of ventricular tachycardia (VT) with a mean incidence of 93.1% (105/114) and 58.6% (69/119), respectively, was observed. Administration of sevoflurane (0.5%) or isoflurane (0.5%) suppressed the induction of VT completely. The intracoronary administration of lidocaine did not modify the effect of these inhalant anesthetics. The suppression by sevoflurane of VT induced by transient coronary artery occlusion is possibly caused by suppression of the coronary arteriolar constriction induced by the transient myocardial ischemia.package com.automatak.render.dnp3.enums import com.automatak.render._ import com.automatak.render.enums._ import com.automatak.render.extended._ object ScramblerMode extends Enum { type Enum = ScramblerMode case object SCRAMBLER extends ScramblerMode case object FALSE extends ScramblerMode case object TRUE extends ScramblerMode } / * Provides the state of the line scrambler. */ object Scrambler extends Enumeration { type Enum = Scrambler object FALSE extends Scrambler(ScramblerMode.FALSE, "False") object TRUE extends Scrambler(ScramblerMode.TRUE, "True") final case object None extends Scrambler final case object FALSE extends Scrambler final case object TRUE extends Scrambler / * @return the mode */ def asScramblerMode: ScramblerMode = _scrambleMode } Funding to study veterans and their illness This year
