The Disability Support Service (DSS) announced that it would be opening the new DSS service for school-aged children in September, with five new clinics set up in London. There are currently more than 30,000 children and young people in this age group with a disability. The new clinics will be located in Tower Hamlets, Islington, Hackney, Camden and Westminster. Niamh Barry, Chief Executive of DSS said: "Our role is to ensure that every young person has the opportunity to reach their potential by making sure they have access to the support they need 570a42141b
