As police in Atlanta were dealing with a fire alarm that took about an hour to squelch, they uncovered a call about a stabbing, NBC Atlanta reports. Turns out a 14-year-old in the general population was charged for a second time with making the call. Police say the boy had told the dispatcher, "Hey I stabbed a girl at school. It's been a long time." Convicted of making false alarms and disturbing the peace last month, the boy was sentenced to the local juvenile detention center. The Atlanta Journal-Constitution calls him a "rare juvenile offender" whose self-appointed counselors say he's been calling 911 for years, beginning at age 6. The case marks the second time the boy has been accused of making a false report at a hospital: He was charged in 2012 with calling police to report that a woman had overdosed on heroin, the Atlanta Journal-Constitution reports.

Bolton team blames Israel for failed US peace plan DAMASCUS, Feb 13 (Reuters) - Bolton, the U.S. envoy to the United Nations, said on Monday that a failed U.S. plan to restart talks with Syria was influenced by Israel, just days after Damascus' envoy accused Washington of seeking to undermine it. Bolton said Secretary of State Mike Pompeo had made clear "the administration's position" on Syria was the "status quo cannot be perpetuated," and that Israel's growing influence in the region was a result of "exploitation of the failure of the Iranian regime in Syria." Israel has long worried

Tarka Trail is a part of the Tarka trilogy. The Tarka Trail Screensaver has been created to bring the breathtaking beauty of the Tarka trails of Devon, UK to your desktop. In Devon there are three major tarka trails that follow the Tarka route for inspiring walkers. The following are the three major tarka trails in Devon: Tarka Trail in Cornwall The tarka trails in Cornwall are designed for people of all levels of fitness to enjoy nature and explore Cornwall's beaches and hills. There are a few tarka trail guides that give you the option of choosing between the tarka trails which includes the following tracks:

The Dead Horse Tarka Trail

This is a quiet route with a number of detours, but it takes you on an unforgettable journey through some of Cornwall's best spots. The route begins with a gentle walk through a wooded valley, and the first views of the sea come from the Carnewas Lane, where you will find three other wooden tarkas to cross. For the next section of the walk, you need to cross the Tarka Trail along a path that runs through the most famous and attractive part of Cornwall. At the end of the Tarka Trail, the official end of the trail, you can either follow the Ridgeway Ridgeway to Trewavas, or return on the same road.

The Tarka Trail of the North

This is a very challenging route, starting in the north west of Cornwall, it begins with a walk up to the Mullion hills, and through the Carn Brea, before walking up to St Ives. On the way, you cross by seven tarkas before walking through the Slea Head peninsula to the end of the trail. After the Slea Head peninsula, you need to get on the route for the Tarka

Trail in the south west of Cornwall. The last tarka of the trail ends at Polzeath, near Tintagel. The Tarka Trail in the North East This
