The Main Drawing Window in AutoCAD is the View menu, via which the user may switch to a co-ordinate system such as the engineering, architectural, or structural. This is a pan and zoom view. Drawings in the AutoCAD system are referenced to a table of contents, or TOC. The user can create a new TOC to organize a drawing or a single drawing can contain many different TOCs. Creating and managing drawings Creating a drawing The most common method for creating a drawing in AutoCAD is to type the command. The command is determined by the keyboard keystrokes when the mouse cursor is placed over the command icon in the main drawing window toolbar. AutoCAD contains a database editor, which stores the data required to recreate the drawing after an accidental deletion. The program's file size is increased by a few MB's by storing data in the database. This file size is negligible in comparison to the size of the AutoCAD file itself. A drawing may be opened in the drawing window, or on screen by selecting the icon in the Windows task bar. Editing and drawing tools The drawing window provides a keyboard shortcut to access the most commonly used tools and commands. Each tool is presented in a small panel window at the top of the drawing window, which may be closed at any time to return to the drawing. The drawing window toolbar has icons that give access to many tools and commands. A menu bar is provided with a number of options available to the user to interact with the drawing. ca3bfb1094
