Vestibular schwannoma (VS) is a benign neoplasm, commonly located intrameatal or intravestibular. This tumor can produce both neurological (tinnitus, deafness, vertigo) and otorhinolaryngological symptoms, involving the cochlea, the oculomotor and the facial nerves. The aetiology of VS is unknown, as is the mechanism by which this tumor grows. It is considered that alteration of the neurotrophic factors and the cell death pathways represent the molecular pathophysiology of these neoplasms. It has been also reported that growth of VS cell proliferation is inhibited by blocking neurotrophin-3 (NT-3). The aim of the present study was to investigate whether apoptotic processes play a role in the growth of VS. Sixteen samples from fresh neoplasms, ten from small and six from large tumors, were analysed for apoptosis by terminal deoxynucleotidyl transferase-mediated biotinylated-d-UTP nick end-labeling (TUNEL). The apoptosis index and the percentage of apoptotic cells in relation to the total cell population were evaluated. The apoptotic index (AI) ranged from 0.05% to 0.57% (mean 0.39 +/- 0.19) and the percentage of apoptotic cells in relation to the total number of cells in the microscopic fields of view ranged from 0.65% to 5.46% (mean 2.85 +/- 1.45). There was a correlation between the AI and the cell number of the microscopic fields of view (r = 0.88, P 0.05). No difference was found between the apoptotic index and the percentage of apoptotic cells in relation to the total cell number in the small and large tumors. The present study suggests that an imbalance of pro- and antiapoptotic factors plays an important role in the pathogenesis of VS. The apoptotic

But there were three very good teams this season in Stanford, Oregon and USC. After a tough loss to a team that beat them easily last year, ASU lost in overtime to UCLA. They lost a tough game at home to an Oregon team that was the worst team in the Pac-12. The other loss wasn't even close, as a good Notre Dame team defeated the Sun Devils in South Bend. Now Arizona State goes to USC on Thanksgiving Day. The Trojans haven't been beaten since USC's loss to Michigan State. The Sun Devils have an excellent opportunity to knock off a Top 10 team. Arizona State has shown a lot of improvement in the preseason media poll. The Sun Devils started the season ranked at No. 8 by USA Today. Two weeks later they fell out of the rankings, but when the AP poll came out, the Sun Devils were 11th.
