The Human Genome Project: toward a genetic map of the twenty-first century. The Human Genome Project (HGP) is scheduled to complete the sequencing of the human genome by 2000. The project will involve the collaborative efforts of the National Institute of Standards and Technology (NIST), the Food and Drug Administration (FDA), the Center for Disease Control (CDC), and the National Human Genome Research Institute (NHGRI), under the aegis of the National Science Foundation (NSF). The project will produce an annotated data base of human genes and the proteins they encode. This data base will be made available to the biomedical community in the form of a catalog of human gene sequences and their corresponding genes. This paper describes the HGP and the timetable associated with its completion. Current and future research areas are summarized. The impact of the project on society as a whole is discussed. This year, the HGP is committed to spending 1 billion dollars in federal funds to complete its work. The NIH, the FDA, and the CDC estimate that this work will directly create at least 75,000 new jobs for the US population during the years 1999-2000. The completion of the HGP also will lead to the development of new drugs and diagnostic tests, and it will likely generate millions of dollars of profit for the pharmaceutical and biotechnology industries. Finnish Anti-Fascist Committee The Finnish Anti-Fascist Committee (FAP; ) was a Finnish political organisation set up in November 1941 by members of the Home Guard (HJ), organised by a member of the society, Arvo Turkki, to try to re-establish the Free Corps (SK), which was dissolved by the Soviet Union. The aim was to fight against the Soviet Union's regime and to establish an anti-communist Finland. The FAP consisted of members of the Home Guard (HJ), the so-called "iron warriors" and non-military volunteers. History The first meeting of the FAP was held at the Helsinki YMCA on 8 November 1941. The FAP issued a declaration, calling for an armed struggle against the Soviet Union. The first battles took place on 9 December, when a Soviet motorised unit attacked some Finnish positions in Petsamo. The FAP attacked Soviet positions on 13 and 14 December, and Soviet troops left Petsamo on 15 December. The FAP provided the SK with reconnaissance aircraft, a large amount of information and small arms and ammunition. This situation made the Soviet Union desperate enough to send two military forces to Petsamo (1st and 2nd Caucasus Fronts) on 15 December 1941. The FAP established the autonomous Petsamo region on 17 December 1941, and conquered it on 24 December. The rest of Finland was occupied by the Red Army on the same day. The Allied war situation made Finland abandon its neutrality on 20 December 1941, and the FAP's policy was to collaborate with the Germans. In April 1942, the FAP was joined by the Finnish National Rifle Association (FNL), which was engaged in the Finnish Civil War. The FAP received 5% of all arms sent to Finland from 1942–1944, amounting to about 4.6 million rifles and pistols. The FAP was disbanded in April 1945, when Finland surrendered. Ideology The ideology of the FAP was based on the idea of "freedom against the totalitarianism of all kinds", which brought together both conservative and liberal ideas. The FAP's concept of freedom was also connected to the ideas of the anti-communism of the western countries.
