of the recent power failures that has left this city in the dark and caused mandatory evacuations of many neighborhoods. It's not surprising for a city that goes into "state of emergency" every time something is happening in the city to come up with power failures. “I’ve had power outages more than I’ve had power on,” said Mid-City resident Jeff Melling. In a city that’s still recovering from Hurricane Katrina, power outages are becoming a greater concern. “The city has been doing all they can to preserve the power in an area where the gas is more than a mile high,” said David Lewis, Louisiana Department of Natural Resources. Houses could be impacted by gas pressures of up to 100 feet high. “Our crews are now building shoring and equipment to shore the gas pressure up and that is going to stabilize the high pressure gas,” Lewis said. In the meantime, residents are being told to keep their gas tanks full, or learn to live without. “They’re finally coming back to life,” said Mike Cabien, Mid-City resident. “I think that one of the best parts is all the bars coming back to life, all the nightclubs being open.” Mid-City is one of the neighborhoods hit the hardest by the power outage.

---

“They said it would take 2 or 3 hours to get power, and my goodness it’s been that long,”

said Cabien.
“Hopefully it won’t last too much download link: your medical practice? A quick guide to the process and information you need to know “The instant of decision is always a particularly bad one. But it is even worse if it is made badly.” – Napoleon Bonaparte The decision to sell your practice and move on to your next career challenge may be the most significant one you ever make. When you make the decision to sell your practice, it means that your practice is no longer your primary focus, and you will no longer have the same level of enthusiasm. Selling your practice will also take a significant emotional commitment and any emotional attachments and ties to your patients, your practice, or your practice’s equipment and systems are sure to get in the way. The most critical decision in the selling process is what physician to approach with the sale of your practice. Typically, you will need to approach either an investor or an estate planning attorney. You will need to decide whether you want a more traditional sale or a management buyout, determine what price you'll set for the practice, and select potential buyers. Here's a quick overview of a traditional sale and a management buyout (MBO).

Traditional Sale: A traditional sale is the easiest option for sellers who are not looking for a buyer who will continue to operate their practice. A traditional sale provides the seller with as much control over the sale as possible and less hassle. A traditional sale requires you to find a buyer, set the price of the practice, and market the practice with a real estate broker. The sale of the practice is handled by a broker or a firm like Colliers International, and you will need to work with a CPA firm to complete the sale. Following the traditional sale process, the seller may continue to practice for a few months or a few years after the sale, but eventually the seller will retire or look for another practice.

MBO: An MBO is a more hands-on process, and the buyer becomes a partner in your practice. Typically, the buyer doesn't want to run the practice, but rather wants to be a partner. The buyer then becomes responsible for all aspects of the practice, such as hiring new employees, hiring and training new physicians, and keeping the practice profitable. MBOs typically need to be done over several
