Fans can then compare and contrast real-life and real-life movement using the new Player Comparison tool, which offers insight into the differences between the athletes. Players' speed and acceleration in particular can be analysed directly on the field - and transferred into gameplay. The in-depth Player Comparison tool can be accessed on a home screen dedicated to the players and kept on the player's desk in his or her player info. The new Player Comparison tool provides a live comparison between two players in real-life and in the game, allows fans to compare stats that have previously only been available in FIFA's match engine. Players can be selected by name, position, team or clubs. The new player comparison features are designed to help fans evaluate the differences between players in real life and in the game, without having to make any manual or imprecise adjustments. The streamlined in-game player comparison tool allows fans to select players by position, have the system calculate their stats, then compare them to players in real life as they move around on the pitch. They can even transfer statistics from the player comparison tool into the interactive, in-game player comparison tool. Once fans have spent some time getting to know a player, they can use the in-game player comparison tool to see how their player stacks up against players in the real world. Fans can even share the player profiles they've created with friends or other social media platforms. "For this season, we have increased the number of video samples on our new player comparison tool and added another layer of information - like height, weight and body-type - to help fans better understand their player in-game. Now, they can see and compare their player's body type, speed and acceleration by comparing them to players in real life using the new player comparison tool," said Andreas Sotnik, FIFA Lead Gameplay Designer. "The new player comparison tool is designed to help fans make important decisions on who to select in FIFA 22, as well as comparing players' stats to determine if they are the right fit for their team." The in-game player comparison tool is also designed to offer fans an accurate representation of the player's skills and abilities on the field, allowing them to see how their player compares with others in real-life. Even when they haven't seen them play yet, they will have some idea of their
