Mindustry is the online multiplayer sandbox crafting strategy game, that revolves around the crafting economy. Each of the 20+ servers that make up the Mindustry network hosts a copy of Mindustry, an open platform that allows players to modify the gameplay rules to suit their own playstyle. Mindustry is in alpha and is still in development. For any and all questions about Mindustry, please contact: games@photonbase.com What is Mindustry? Mindustry is the online multiplayer sandbox crafting strategy game. It revolves around the crafting economy, or, "the economy-crafting-economy." The economy enables interaction between crafted goods and crude materials, while the crafting enables interaction between the resources. Mindustry launched in 2015 as a beta launch, and a few months later was officially released. It is still developing. Why is the economy so important to Mindustry? The crafting economy is important to Mindustry, because it enables interaction between the resources. In Minecraft (the progenitor of Mindustry), it is only possible to gather resources and craft resources. As such, the only way to interact with those resources is to take the resources, combine them with other resources, and craft the resources. What would a non-economy crafting game be like? A non-economy crafting game would have no economic system. There would be no way to interact with or control resources other than to mine them. Because of this, there would be no interaction between the resources. In a non-economy crafting game, no resources would ever be processed, so the crafting of any resource would be impossible. Resources would be purely for mining and gathering, and would not be for anything else. If crafting is your main goal, and you don't care about the economy, you can just remove the crafting system from the game entirely. How is Mindustry different from Minecraft? In addition to being a multiplayer sandbox, Mindustry is also a crafting economy, crafting, and resource management game. Minecraft is a creative sandbox. You are free to create anything you can imagine. Mindustry is also a crafting economy, crafting, and resource management game. You have different resources to manage, and have a need to interact between resources. The economy is the driving force behind the crafting in Mindustry. How is crafting in Mindustry different

News(MIAMI) -- The first artificial heart transplant performed in the United States ended successfully Thursday, according to researchers from Jackson Memorial Hospital in Miami. "It works," said Aaron Levy, director of Heart and Vascular Center at the hospital, after the transplant. The patient, a 34-year-old woman, was taken to the hospital from a home health agency in South Florida and was on a respirator. Her organs were donated by her husband. The patient's surgery was developed by Dr. Sangeeta Nanda, head of Cardiology and Heart Surgery at the hospital, and her team, in collaboration with a team from the University of Miami. "You always want to save a life and this was a unique case of where patients were willing to donate," Nanda said. "It does kind of seem like a scene out of a science fiction movie." According to the researchers, the artificial heart offers another option for patients suffering from end-stage heart failure. The patient was already an established heart transplant candidate. "We're optimistic that the HeartMate will enable her long-term survival," said Levy. The patient is receiving drugs to prevent rejection of her new heart, Levy said. The second patient to have a heart transplanted in the United States received a new heart in October. The patient is undergoing rehabilitation at the University of Florida. Nanda said a third patient who has received an artificial heart is expected to undergo surgery in early January.Q: c9d1549cdd

Flatpak Linux 2 is a distribution for laptops and desktop computers based on flatpak, a natively integrated software technology that works on Windows, MacOS and Linux, designed to bring software, data and hardware without copying (and with the software installation size being of the order of a few dozen megabytes). In Flatpak 1, software and data could be installed from a single source: a flatpak-built tarball, which was then installed in a data directory called.flatpak-dir. After installing Flatpak 1 software, you were still on flatpak, not yet inside the app. This caused some problems, such as when starting a Flatpak 1 app: the Flatpak daemon started the app. Flathub, the Flatpak client, showed a message on starting an app and offered to start the Flatpak daemon for you. After starting an app and Flathub was closed, the Flatpak daemon did not start. Since Flatpak 1 is a distribution based on Flatpak 2, many problems have been solved. Flatpak 2 is a client-server system, not a client-client system, and the Flatpak daemon is now optional. Flatpak 2 is also able to integrate with upstream Linux software repositories (e.g. apt, snap). Flatpak 2 is released as Flatpak Linux 2.FLATPAK Linux 2 integrates with Flatpak 1, using flatpak 1's own.flatpak-dir data directory. Installed Flatpak 1 software and data will be updated automatically when Flatpak 2 software updates, making sure you get the latest features.New and important features in Flatpak Linux 2 include:* Compact Flatpak 2 archives* A Flatpak 1 archive contains both the app and the app-data, allowing you to continue to use it without Flatpak 1.* An app can be installed with Flatpak 2 without a Flatpak daemon, so you don't need to start the app. This allows running Flatpak 1 apps from a Flatpak 2 roots. (This feature will be important for those systems that do not have a Flathub client, such as desktop Linux distributions that ship by default with Flatpak 2 instead of Flathub).* Flatpak 2 can use Flatpak 1, so the same Flatpak 1 binaries can run on both Flatpak 2 and Flatpak 1.* Flatpak 1 continues to be maintained by Flatpak 1 developers.* Flatpak 1 will continue to be maintained for a year after Flatpak 2 is available in the distribution's main repositories.* Flat

Electrical Checks Blog Custom electrical checks used by Farmers AirCheck in the UK I have been asked to write about the official website of the Farmers AirCheck (ft.co.uk/airscheck) unit that they have been sending me electrical checks on their company premises. The reason being that a new farm in Scotland has been monitoring the Electrical Perimeter in their games areas and their game is working, have found an electrical fault, and I was asked whether I could help. I am happy to help and also do their YouTube channel electrical reviews. As I have been asked to write about this company I thought that you may like a little info about the type of electrical checks they undertake. For more information on the Fairlight System Ltd. f.co.uk/airscheck unit, and Hire Electrical Results, then please have a look at the other pages in this blog.

Electrical Checks by FAIRLIGHT The system that PAIRLY sends out to customers at their premises is one that Fairlight have been making and developing for many years. The main distinguishing feature of this system, which is a standard adopted by most electrical companies in Britain, is that it allows the user to use their own metres to check the electrical safety of their installation, and also allows them to get free testing and repairs carried out. They operate nationally in the UK, Ireland, and the Northern Isles of Scotland, but not in the Islands of Scotland and Wales, and cover most areas of England and southern and western Scotland. Before this system was in wide use it was not uncommon for the peace of mind that having monitoring connected to the wall socket was a widely accepted method of electrical safety monitoring in the UK, but as more and more electricity companies adopted this system it has now become the standard means of using individual tests on the premises, and most will do same on the premises. So if you want to get peace of mind you too should get your meters connected up to the supply that you use and report any non-working electrical items to the people that are doing the inspection. The system of the gas suppliers only using their meters is commonplace these days, but I am sure that they will always uphold their responsibilities as this system is known within the electrical companies that they supply. Along with this they have a local branch that offers free inspection and repairs to customers who may think that they are being paid by electricity companies to perform individual tests on their meters. All of these suppliers have been accredited to the system, with
