However, because of the large and diverse coalition who could be assembled, Bap is wrong to say that there is not time to fully develop an effective international coalition to suppress the war. During the 1991 Gulf War, Iraq fired Scud missiles at Israel, Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, and other locations in a pre-emptive strike. During this conflict, the United States and allied forces were able to undertake ground and air operations with a total of roughly 150,000 troops, the majority of which were deployed in and around Saudi Arabia. The task of suppressing the Kuwaiti-Iraqi conflict was entrusted to the coalition coalition forces. Coalition troops were provided armored support to keep enemy ground troops at a distance. These coalition troops conducted a variety of tasks, ranging from providing combat air patrol and riverine patrols to shooting down Iraqi helicopter gunships and destroying Iraqi infantry forces. The coalition coalition were able to achieve this objective because of many factors including the long air campaign, significant advances in technology, the reputation of coalition troops, and U.S. president George H. WBush and the presence of coalition troops in Saudi Arabia. However, just as the coalition coalition forces had a good chance of winning the war, so did Iraq. Thanks to their Scud missiles, which inflicted heavy casualties on coalition troops in Saudi Arabia, as well as among Israeli troops on the Golan Heights, Iraq was able to delay coalition coalition operations in Kuwait and defeat the coalition coalition forces. However, using conventional, crude, and ill-conceived tactics, the Iraqi forces could not destroy the coalition coalition forces, which eventually pushed the Iraqi army out of Kuwait.

(a) Give an example of a finite dimensional vector space V and a subspace W such that $V \otimes V \cong W \oplus W \oplus W$, but $V \otimes V \not\cong W$

$\oplus W$. I have attempted this without success. Here is what I have attempted. Let $V = \text{span}\{v_1, v_2\}$. Let $W = \text{span}\{w_1, w_2\}$. My guess is that I may be able to show $\text{span}\{v_1 \otimes w_1, v_2 \otimes w_1, v_1 \otimes w_2, v_2 \otimes w_2\}$ is a basis for $V \otimes W$, and hence that $V \otimes W \cong W \oplus W \oplus W$. If this is true, we have that $\dim(V \otimes W) = 4$ and $\dim(W) = 2$, so $V \otimes W \cong W \oplus W \oplus W$.

EDIT: I was incorrect above. It is true that $\text{span}\{v_1 \otimes w_1, v_2 \otimes w_1, v_1 \otimes w_2, v_2 \otimes w_2\}$ is a basis for $V \otimes W$. For example, from the spanning property, $w_1 \otimes w_1 + w_2 \otimes w_1 + w_1 \otimes w_2 + w_2 \otimes w_2 \in \text{span}\{v_1 \otimes w_1, v_2 \otimes w_1, v_1 \otimes w_2, v_2 \otimes w_2\}$. Since $w_1 \otimes w_1 + w_2 \otimes w_1$
