Application for Windows that allows you to create loudspeaker boxes and crossovers.With the demand for more copper metal, or other metals or alloys, for electrical and electronic applications, and the like, metallurgists are exploring novel processes by which to produce such metal, or alloys. For example, processes for producing alloys of copper have heretofore utilized fusion in an electrical furnace. The production of copper by fusion is accomplished by immersing copper or copper-base alloys in a bath of molten metal to form a copper ingot which is then rolled to form a continuous strip of sheet copper which may be further processed into various useful copper end products, such as electrical and electronic wiring, as well as other copper products. In current practice, a fused copper strip (for instance, a 5 to 6 inch thick strip) is subjected to a number of mechanical and chemical processes, such as rolling, annealing, and possibly descaling, to create a desired finished copper product. Unfortunately, this process can be very expensive. Additionally, the mechanical and chemical operations required to prepare such strips can damage the resulting copper product, reducing the quality thereof. This invention relates to a method for manufacturing copper sheets (for example, a sheet of copper weighing about 4 or 5 pounds) and the finished product achieved thereby. More particularly, the invention relates to a method for producing copper sheets from bar stock copper. It is known that copper can be produced by a rolling process, the advantage of such being that lower-cost, high
