Impossible by its very definition. The Last Tinker: City of Colors was born from our love for classic platformers, from the magic of the 16-bit era, but also with one eye on the future. With only the two of us behind it, The Last Tinker: City of Colors is an exceptional vision, for the most human of games. We are two freaks, a talented artist and a developer, with a love of all things retro, and a special kind of relationship with nostalgia. Because we dream, The Last Tinker: City of Colors is a work of art that pokes fun at all the intricate things that can make us dream, and is inspired by the great classics of the last 30 years of gaming. Inspired by games like Super Mario 64, Crash Bandicoot, Jak & Daxter, Metroid, and many other greats. The Last Tinker: City of Colors is a charming, light-hearted platformer, where you can take on the role of a self-determined character, going from level to level to solve puzzles, uncover hidden secrets, and enjoy unique animations. You travel from level to level, following the storyline of The Last Tinker, a sweet girl who accidentally escaped from the laboratory. The special soundtrack pays homage to the best platformers of the '90s. It's a game that fully respects the concept of "it's impossible, but that doesn't mean it's not possible". It's a fairly typical platformer, you run, jump, climb, swing on ropes and hang from ledges, but the gameplay is a unique fusion of the classic platform and the rotation mechanics of Super Mario 64. It's an incredible work of art, full of charm, simple and fun. We want to thank every person that has contributed to this project. We want to especially thank Luca Belli, for his invaluable and unique help, and Ricky Molinari, for making the game look so good! Editor Martin is an indie game developer living in Berlin, Germany. His love for platforming games and being able to create his own games, inspired his career choice at the beginning of the last decade. His games were already known for their absurd humour and eerie atmosphere, but he was still mainly known for making short jaunts in Hotel Transylvania. Nowadays he develops his own games, and tries to make sure he does not work alone.
