el Pérez's surgical outcomes after extraocular muscle transposition: 10-year follow-up of 103 patients. To determine the surgical outcomes of extraocular muscle (EOM) transposition for strabismus using a prospective analysis of 10-year follow-up data. 103 patients (137 eyes) who were operated from 1983 to 1994 by the same surgeon underwent EOM transposition for acquired or congenital strabismus with the aim of improving the binocular vision. The postoperative deviation of primary position before and after surgery were measured by cover tests. At the 10-year follow-up, the surgical outcomes were evaluated in terms of operative deviation of primary position before and after surgery, the stereoscopic vision, patient satisfaction, and the correlation between the extraocular muscle function and the alignment. The postoperative deviation of primary position in 107/137 eyes (77.1%) was within 10 prism diopter (PD) of the primary position without any limitation of gaze. 52% of the 105 patients had suppression of 1 diopter (D) and 87% had suppression of more than 1 D. 79% of the patients had acquired an esotropia. The visual fields were restricted in 24.4% of the patients. A statistically significant correlation was found between the extraocular muscle function and the alignment. Binocular vision was attained in 90% of the patients before surgery. All the patients were satisfied with the cosmetic and social outcome. EOM transposition is a safe and successful procedure for restoring a good alignment in the cases of acquired and congenital strabismus, as well as esotropia, especially hyperotropia. The surgical outcome depends on the excellent surgical technique and a healthy conjunctiva.Q: How to extract item from array of C# I have an array of objects.
