Charity chef makes a lasting impact through frugal food Laurie Johnson graciously accepts a request for a book signing at the Famous Chef Shack in Williamsburg after its founding in 2011. WABC By Judith Rosen, WTNH � FAIRFIELD, Conn. -- A simple dish -- a pot of brown rice, plunked on the table, a sliced apple on the side -- is a charming way to get well-meaning but clueless people to eat their vegetables. Two of those well-meaning people came to the Famous Chef Shack in the tiny town of Fairfield about a year ago. The chef was Lori Simons. "As we started saying, 'please don't make us eat our vegetables,' they have said, 'no, we're going to help you, too,'" said Lori Simons, who runs the Famous Chef Shack in Fairfield. Despite a dozen years in the restaurant business, this was her first foray into full-time self-employment. A lawyer, she had a full-time career before starting the Famous Chef Shack out of her home about a year ago. She also spent much of her career working in home health care, and she says she never worked in a professional kitchen. The first dinner she served, in May 2011, was lobster mac and cheese. "We had a great response," she said. "We started with lobster, next it was rabbit chili, then it was stuffed ravioli, then we went to grilled cheese for a while, then it was mac and cheese." The mac and cheese, stuffed with a meatball, mushrooms and prosciutto, is the one dish at the Famous Chef Shack that she insists
