Just, "something happened", and the servers are gone. They can't even say what it was about, despite this being a pretty significant one (their public-facing servers were suddenly disappearing for a month). They haven't bothered even updating their status page, for the first time since their inception. This is a fraud, completely, with one exception: we have no idea what the sex was, or who the victims are. It's basically an anonymous, heh, assault. It's not even an assault with severe physical harm or a threat against their life, it's more of a dirty, pindrop sex between two people who had nothing better to do. It's a very similar scenario to what movie producers use to get victims and fall people to do pornographic movies. These people had nothing better to do but play around with a video chat service. They had their IP addresses, and the money (their ISP bill) for the servers. If they were not involved in the crime, they've got a pretty solid motive

It was released on June 8, 2010, by Capitol Records, as the lead single from Teenage Dream. The song is a mid-tempo ballad, with lyrical themes of love, regret, and wanting someone to try to make things right. Perry co-wrote the song, along with its producers Michael "Luv" Raymond and Toby Gad. Musically, it is one of the slower songs in Perry's discography, with a piano intro played by Perry. It has been compared to the music of country singer Dolly Parton. The song was well received by music critics, being noted as one of the highlights of Teenage Dream. Critics praised its arrangement, instrumentation, and Perry's vocals. The song was a commercial success, debuting and peaking at number nine on the Billboard Hot 100, becoming Perry's third highest-charting single of all-time and highest-debuting at number nine, behind "California Gurls" and "Teenage Dream". It also reached number one in Italy, Spain, and Switzerland. The song won the Grammy Award for Best Pop Duo/Group Performance. Recording and composition The song's title was first announced on May 19, 2010, via Katy Perry's official website. On May 26, "Acapulco" was officially released as the lead single from Teenage Dream. Katy Perry wrote the song with her collaborators, Michael "Luv" Raymond and Toby Gad, and went to a small recording studio in California to record it. The song is a mid-tempo ballad, with lyrics about "a girl on the run". Music and lyrics "Acapulco" is
