However, the distribution of the error for the classification was only between 2 classes, and the only difference observed for the different classes was in the medians. Given this observation, we decided to keep the three standard deviation limits as no compromise was observed in terms of resolution and overall accuracy.

Discussion ===== The classification based on the level of decrease in the Cdyn shows that there is a significant difference in the treatment of the patients in terms of their medical status. A greater decrease in Cdyn together with a stabilization of the values of the echographic classification criteria, and a more rapid recovery from the stress test are factors of the best prognosis. The determination of the prognosis of our selected population is essential for the adjustment of treatments. The simplified assessment of the patient in the stress test allows us to obtain the speed of the patient recovery in the SICU, and also helps to reduce the costs for the new tests. These data were already available in the literature. For example, Strohmenger et al. showed that out of 47 critically ill patients, the 28 patients who had an early decrease in Cdyn showed a beneficial result, and the 19 patients who had a stable or a decreasing level of Cdyn had a poor clinical outcome \[@B7\]. Our study provides evidence that the classification obtained by the two risk stratification tools applied to patients with septic shock syndrome could be used as a useful prognostic method, and that the level of the decrease in Cdyn could predict the clinical condition of the patient in this setting, in addition to the classification given by the echocardiography \[@B10\].

Limitations ----- The main limitation of the study is the small number of patients included in the sample. Moreover, the complexity of the data and their organization often prevented the evaluation of certain variables by all of the members of the study team, which explains the small number of cases included in some of the variables analyzed. The prospective study design involves the possibility of a

Direct.Hello everyone, this is Adam Mushat, founder and CEO of Axtell Remodeling & Design. I'm here today to talk about what we're calling #HomeImprovementSunday — a chance for many of you to comment and ask questions about home improvements. We're a small business that's been growing fast in the last few years. Most of the things we offer are about countertop materials, kitchen and bath products, paint and finishes, new construction, remodels, and drywall products. There are a lot of things we can talk about today about doing home renovations and home improvements with a small business, but one thing I really want to talk about is the "what's in it for you?" We all have a place where we spend a large amount of time each day, whether it's work, school, or being with friends. There's no reason you have to live in a single-family home if you don't want to, and if you love your home and wouldn't want to live anywhere else, why would you ever want to live in a small space? Everybody has the dream of their home being the perfect spot to rest, entertain guests, or spend a few days or weeks when they're away. If it's not your dream home, why not take the opportunity to create a home that fits your lifestyle and enjoy the space more? Make the first step of that renovation today. You may not have enough time for a major renovation. Or you may want to take advantage of a great sale or new products. We're here to help! The best way to find out what your local small business is up to is to subscribe to our RSS feed. Sign up for our newsletter here. Like this: Like Loading... Apple still
