Q: Should I use Tap Insight for iOS apps? I'm finishing an app and am wondering if I should include tap insight for my app?

A: Somehow I'm feeling like it's not that necessary. I'm planning to submit it soon, but I'd like to hear some opinions. It doesn't really make my app look better. It's just not quite useful for my app. As it's a restaurant review app, it will show you the reviews of certain restaurants, and you can tap the review you want to see. My first impression is just to tap it and go to the URL. The reviewers will be viewing their own reviews, so I don't need to show my reviews to them. Is Tap Insight necessary? A: I think tap insight is good for the education and context of your reviews because it helps your users learn more about their reviews. You should definitely include it!

Remember that having tap insight helps increase the number of reviews. Whether or not it increases your app's downloads is another story. If you aren't worried about downloads, then tap insight is a good move. A: I've used Tap Insight in two apps that were both submitted to the app store. I had no problems in either case. I'm not sure why you think that it would not be useful. You need to consider the following criteria: Are you concerned about the user awareness of your app, and therefore want to use Tap Insight? Are

Development of ultrasonic lipolysis system for mass production of nutritionally important soybean oils. Lipases are proteins that catalyze the hydrolysis of the glycerol triacylglycerol, which is widely used in food, pharmaceutical, and cosmetic industries. The development of an efficient and cost-effective lipolysis system for the production of soybean oils, which have a wide range of nutritional and health benefits, was a priority for this study. Under optimized conditions, the developed ultrasonic lipolysis system has shown superior yield (88.4%) and low purification index (15.2% vs. 22.6%) of soybean oils with 39.4% decrease in trans fatty acid. This lipolysis system was tested with raw materials with different levels of water. The optimal amount of water in the raw materials was 0.6% of the total weight of the sample. Therefore, ultrasonic lipolysis system is effective in the production of nutritionally important oils from soybean and other crops.
