It is highly readable and bluntly states the truth about the USSR that Khrushchev was responsible for revealing. As a result of his speech to the 20th Party Congress in February 1956, Khrushchev was ousted from power in October. He explores the deep reasons of the cult of personality, pointing out that the danger of spreading it in the future lies in giving excessive power and authority to one man. He warns that this has happened under Stalin and has harmed the Soviet Union. He says that the supreme centres of power must be assigned to those who are best equipped to assume responsibility for the country. However, he notes that the people are guided by their fellow citizens rather than by the party, and their sympathy with their leader plays only a small part in their decision-making. He says: "The party must not be an eternal power; its task is to prepare
