Developed by Asobi Buujin Entertainment, YANKAI'S PEAK. is a new twist on the puzzle puzzle genre. Each level is an elaborate maze of pathways and walkways, so the only way to get from point A to point B is to find the right path. As you play through your first level, you'll start to notice that there are hidden paths and passageways that you haven't seen before. When you find one of these, you'll be able to continue your journey in the next level. But wait, there's more! Every puzzle begins with a clue that you must find and use in order to reach the end of the level. The clue is one of four different types: one letter, an object, a picture or a tool. The clues will lead you through the maze, and a few levels might have more than one clue. You'll have to experiment and use your observation skills to complete each puzzle. Kind words from a reader: What I'm reading... It was so nice to have a letter from reader. He is a young architect from Texas who runs a training program for architects. He talked a lot about an appreciation for space. Who knew architecture has so much to do with it! He asked me to share his letter with you because it related to the challenge of trying to lay out a new "edge"... here: Recently, I've been thinking about the house we're building and how it's so damn big. Yes, a lot of it, about 4000 square feet, is opening up. We built it 10 years ago and while we've always wanted a garage or auto shop or something (already in the garage), I hate the idea of a concrete or brick box around this new space. We need lots of space to keep our 3 girls. I think there's a great line from David Bowie-"Space and music and birds and wild flowers". So over a dinner we hatched a new, simple, large-window plan. Rather than a B-10 flush flush wall, we decided to give some serious thought to the glass on the bottom of the window. Start with a concrete sill in the floor. We then added 2 4" boards on either side, then started calling friends. Over a year, we got quotes from four different windows manufacturers. I mentioned that we wanted it to be as cheap as possible. We looked for ideas and what we learned was we were going to pay about $10-$100 per window. The consensus was we'd need at least 2: 1.8x4 glass and 1.6x4 for a total of 3 "windows". We checked out 5 construction companies

Story of Seasons is a life-long role-playing game in which the player embarks on a journey of cultivation to become the leader of a local village. During this journey, the player will obtain experience points and increase the amount of their experience points. Once the player reaches a certain level (which depends on the character's class), the player is able to learn skills that will increase their chances of survival in the wilderness. The player's skills will also be raised with the experience points. A certain event will occur in Mineral Town at the start of spring, so players must be prepared to help out with the villagers' daily life. Players must collect the necessary materials for farming, foraging and for shelter. As players fulfill their objectives, they will earn experience points. This allows the players to improve their skills and their farming productivity. After certain stages, players will receive a job offer (a monthly fee plus a bonus if the players can complete their objective at that time). In order to complete the job, players will have to collect a certain amount of materials for that job. The more materials collected, the higher the level and the fee for that job. Players can now purchase new tools that they can use to make their farming tasks easier. Apart from these tools, players will have to make use of the various tools they will find in the fields to increase their productivity. Players will be able to have multiple jobs at the same time. Choosing the job that gives the most amount of experience points will help to improve the player's skills. Players will be able to play their favorite songs from the Music Player that they can find in the Mineral Town. Players will be able to obtain additional rewards by cleaning their house. The goal of the house cleaning campaign is to clean all the dirt in the house at once. It's best to avoid cleaning the house during times of extreme weather. Players will be able to carry a backpack with various items. They can also put any plant in the farm to grow at the stable. *Additional information will be provided in the next update!
