A: I faced the same issue but then I solved it. I took C:\ProgramData\Anti-virus, C:\ProgramData\Anti-spyware and C:\ProgramData\bundled programs and deleted them. Then found files of the program you've mentioned in C:\ProgramData\Software\Microsoft\Windows\ CurrentVersion\Uninstall and deleted it. So you have to remove the registry and the program. The first time that water sports and surfing in Uruguay were officially designated a public sport, the result was that clubs were formed to promote their practice. Cofradías, competitions, surf schools and associations were born, and surfing became a more official and popular culture. In the last decade, Uruguay has made a slow but steady return to its surf heritage. Thanks to the efforts of people like Fernando Logarzo, businessman and president of the Asociación Uruguaya de Surf, surf heritage is now part of the Uruguayan cultural offer. Logarzo took the initiative in 2013, organizing an exhibition on the Uruguayan waves at the Palacio Duhau Park and other locations in Montevideo. Every year, a grand surfing competition is organized at Punta del Este, sponsored by the DAS (Dirección Autonómica del Sur) and the federal government. There have also been surf competitions in Uruguayan waters such as those held at Los Leones and Cabrero. Recently, the country's first national surfing championship was held in 2011. There are also various initiatives in the hands of private entrepreneurs aiming to promote the sport. One of the most important is Phoenix SURFER, an association that promotes the practice of surfing at the Santa Lucía beach on the coasts of el Litoral, with a group of players to compete at national and international level. It also organizes classes and competitions and sells surfboards. When he first took office in 2011, President José Mujica introduced the Plan de Interés Económico that included new incentives for entrepreneurs, including a tax credit for those who invest in the creation of a new business and reduced real estate taxes. With one of the highest unemployment rates in Latin America, the country has lacked appropriate labor laws. But the new government is seeing to it that the law is correctly enforced and that people who would like to work can find work. The new law guarantees the right

So I am new to the whole Arduino thing, but I have a serious question. I want to be able to control lights using the remote that I have from my computer. I've been watching a bunch of videos and I can get the remote to control the LEDs with the code I've written. The problem is when I send a signal it the LED stays on for a second and then it stops. When I use the servo library it works fine it just won't transmit signals. I would
