The railway tracks will be laid on-site, cutting out the need for standard rail-laying equipment.

Founded in 1856, Stadler is a heavy industry and manufacturing conglomerate with a focus on the railway industry. In addition to the HSR project, the company has been working on similar projects in the US as well.

The HSR project is a five-year development that would result in the installation of 2,000 km (1,243 miles) of railway tracks to be installed in Nevada's Western coalfields. The system would operate for around five decades. The tracks would run from a hub on the Nevada-California border and spread out over a couple of
