This is the easiest way to access your local network share using Windows Explorer. Simply type SMB://Servername/Sharename and you will be able to access your share. Kinda like visiting a remote PC directly using File Explorer or simply by typing its IP address into your browser. This document describes the high-level directory structure of the Software Development Kit (SDK) of the SecureBlackBox Enterprise Edition (SBX) for the Win32 platform. The SBX includes a comprehensive set of predefined and custom tools for automated and manual simulation of security features. It supports both attack simulation and monitoring of system behavior. The SDK is based on the Open Source application -SBX. The SDK includes a large library of libraries that enables other applications to interact with the SBX. The libraries provide support for all the functions required for the automated or manual simulation of the security features of the SBX including: commands to start simulators, upload and download scripts, manage and control the simulators, log simulators, and tools for configuring and collecting simulation results. The following directories are included in the SBX SDK distribution: [1] Install - Contains all the files for installation on a Windows computer. [2] Scripts - Manage, control, and run simulation scripts. [3] Scripts Analysis - Analyze simulation results. [4] Help - Provides information on the use of the SDK. All the applications in this distribution are Open Source (you can get the source code from One application, SecureBlackBox console, is an interface to connect the SBX to your computer and to run scripts. The application is based on Windows console and uses the PowerShell scripting language to control the SBX. Because the SBX is based on a Windows application, it does not support all of the features of the Windows PowerShell. You can use the tools included with the Windows PowerShell to install the SBX and to run scripts from it. The following directory structure is used to separate the documents into parts and chapters. This structure can be used when browsing through all the documents. [1] Home - Contains all the documents published by the authors of this book. [2] Comments and feedback - Documents submitted by users of this book. [3] Self-studymaterial - Documents meant for self-study. [4] Paper-of-study - Reference material for our students. [5] Source - Documents that describe the implementation of the Republicans say the new plan will finally fix the "dramatically inadequate" healthcare marketplaces. But these sweeping changes, even if they were without fault, would represent an attack on employer-sponsored health insurance as well as the needs and ability of workers to choose their own healthcare for themselves. Most of the reform proposals would be a blow to the small- and mid-sized businesses that employ most workers, because these employers often pay for insurance as a profit, or as an incentive to hire and retain gualified workers. But the most sweeping of the plan's proposals will not affect small employers. Under the House proposal, the government would give small employers a $100-a-person rebate to switch their employees' healthcare to governmentsponsored plans, called insurance exchanges. This rebate would be in addition to the $3,000 average annual tax break small employers would get for their contributions to their employees' plans. This tax break will also remain intact. "The problem with this plan is it's a double-tax on employers, and we need to get them out of the healthcare system," says Robert Book
