Provision of MPH programmes based on the curriculum used in this study is likely to increase the availability and utilisation of more than 70% of the items offered in the MPH programme, as some skills are more prioritised in the curriculum than others. This is supported by our findings that facilitators' scores for content coverage of the course components were more highly rated than for skills. Study findings also highlight issues that require attention if the MPH curriculum is to be optimised in relation to the value it provides, and maximise students' experience. Strengths and weaknesses {#s4b} ----- Some limitations of this study are noted. The sample of students who have a right to choose MPH programme providers may not be representative of all students in the country. The participants were recruited by snowball sampling from students who had already opted for MPH and responded to a postal survey. This may have limited the generalisability of the findings. However, as students in the country are required to choose from available MPH programmes, we are confident that our sample provides a fair view of the course components that students value. Conclusions {#s4c} ----- We conclude that, although the MPH curriculum has highly positive outcomes in terms of its contribution to knowledge and skills development, an optimal model of curricular design is needed if it is to become a more relevant and efficient option for students than the more traditional BSc/BA programme. We propose that the MPH curriculum needs to be refocused by more clearly prioritising content related to clinical decision-making, ethics, health economics and services research (evidence and policy), and communication skills, bff6bb2d33

var surfix = "?v=ATDAN7ZjKI"; document.write(""); Q: Javascript - Calling Math.max with only a fraction gives me the wrong answer I'm working on a JavaScript challenge where I am supposed to think myself out of a "peaceful" loop. I've only given myself a min since the large project I'm working on is due this afternoon. Anyway, I've got a loop repeating for the sake of trying to get it out of a loop. Here is the loop: while(Prob < p){ Prob += Math.random() if(Math.max(Prob, Prob1, Prob2, Prob3, Prob4) == 0.5){ Prob1, Prob2, Prob3, Prob4 = 0.7, 0.6, 0.4, 0.2, 0.1; } else{ Prob1, Prob2, Prob3, Prob4 = 0.3, 0.5, 0.1, 0.3; } } In this scenario, I get the maximum out of the loop and end up with a very slightly smaller probability within the loop each time. Why is this? A: .max() returns what is the maximum of the arguments or the first argument, which is 0.5 in your case
