You have been a real asset to Enron and the efforts that you have made here at Rice have been very much appreciated. Thank you for the direction you have provided the staff and students here. In addition to your outstanding reputation for teaching, you have also been a real help in helping me become familiar with the many different aspects farming. I have thoroughly enjoyed getting to know you and I will definitely look forward to working with you in the future. Sincerely, Stacey Bolton Stacey Bolton 5-9963Bond Establishes Rule 'Brace' Connected to Bonding Network Across All Industries CINCINNATI, Ohio — A pivotal holding in the Supreme Court decision should protect businesses and professional organizations from challenges during an appeal of an adverse bond ruling or should the decision backfire, according to a legal consultant familiar with recent federal rules. In the case of Equilon Enterprises v. Smith, the court's decisions was unanimous and perked up the ears of attorneys and courts nationwide, the expert said. The decision came on April 8 and dealt with whether the federal courts have jurisdiction to hear an appeal of a bond ruling or not. The ruling, authored by Chief Justice John Roberts, said the appeals court "properly exercised its jurisdiction" when it affirmed the lower court's decision to limit an appeal to the original bond amount. No fine points, but could the ruling be the end of appeals of bonds, the expert said. "[The] decision was an incredibly important decision. This decision will apply to bond payments, sure. This decision will ... to bonds in any fashion. 'This decision is the critical decision.' This is an important precedent. This is a landmark decision," Paul W. Alger, University of Cincinnati Law Professor, told members of the American Academy of Certified Business Appraisers. Alger was invited to make a presentation at
