This is an exploit built on top of a good old variation of the Brutal PHP 0.1 exploit. The weaknesses of Brutal PHP are well known and the author of Abnormal decided to do something different. Abnormal PHP uses the previously observed V8, as in any other PHP Remote code execution exploit, but instead of using an unpatched V8, it uses a patched version. As soon as the exploit is running, the attacker starts to be able to run arbitrary PHP code that is evaluated in the context of the web server and it gets the privileges as the PHP web server user. In this way, the issue can be considered a zero day in PHP given that Abnormal PHP 0.2 affects official PHP versions 7.1.1, 7.2.2, 7.3, 7.4, and 7.5. In version 0.2 of Abnormal, the attacker must be able to inject the malicious PHP code into the source of the command scripts.
