I'll start this article by saying that we all love a good strategy game. From the ancient chess game - often played on the board - to more contemporary games like Starcraft and Company of Heroes (as well as Command and Conquer and other real-time strategy games). They are games that require attention and effort to understand, are taxing and rewarding at the same time. I'll also say that Company of Heroes is arguably the best real-time strategy game ever made. Its a game of epic proportions. That makes me feel a little old. But one can be old and loving a game and love it even more because it's the best game out there. We created a User Group, which allows us to speak directly to our players through a forum. It's a great place to learn more about our players and why they love Company of Heroes so much. The second most important part of Company of Heroes 2: Ardennes Assault is the Battle of the Bulge campaign, with its skirmishes, assaults and assaults. Units are given three classes: melee, artillery and aerial, and all three can be upgraded on the battlefield, along with a new melee weapon and a new close quarters weapon.

During the battles, player forces will employ a third player camera to zoom in and out and create a third map overview.

Players can then choose which maps to rotate in through the options. If you have been following the site for a while, you would have also seen some words about World War 2 games. Before Company of Heroes 2 was released, we made a long list of World War 2 games that we want to see. Company of Heroes 2 may very well not be the next game, but it has been added to that list. It is one of the best World War 2 games, and for a game that is so different, with a different set of play mechanics, I am happy. Its still got World War 2 for me. There you have it. Im getting old. I admit it.

And I like to see a game that can be enjoyed by me, even if its far from my best genre. I dont know how to describe it, if its gone the way of War Thunder, or F.E.A.R. 2, or something else, but this is a game that I would love to play. Just stop mumbling, wake up, stand up and make Company of Heroes 2. The success of Company of Heroes 2 has been a bit shocking to me. I never expected Relic to do as well as they did; they have some great talent, but I thought they were just a one hit wonder, making one great game and that was it.
