MCOM 5110 Accounting Courses for Managers (3) - This course is designed to help managers define, control and measure their firms financial performance and to place information into context to enable managers to make better operational decisions. Emphasis will be placed on the design and operation of accounting systems and procedures that allow managers to make adequate and well informed decisions. Over a four-week period, the course will include a set of case studies that illustrate the various decision and reporting alternatives for diverse types of organization. After studying the cases, students will have the opportunity to select their own case study and develop their own answer to the case. The cases should have practical application and the course will emphasize the integration of the information obtained from various areas of accounting, finance, and business studies. ACCN 6750 Financial Reporting for Audit Engagements (3) - The student will gain a thorough understanding of the core areas of financial reporting including their interpretation and importance in the accounting, audit, and financial reporting processes.

While this course will be most applicable to the student preparing for an audit engagement, the information presented may be useful to those who have recently been audited and/or have been engaged in preparing financial statements.

MCOM 5030 Processes and Procedures for Managerial Decisions (3) - This course explores the scope and types of decisions faced by managers and agencies, and the role of advanced decision-making methods in decision-making. The course begins by examining both the formal and informal decision-making processes in the work world and the role of advanced decision-making methods in decision-making. It continues by examining the impact of the formal and informal decision-making process on the choices managers make, the processes through which they accomplish the task of organizational or departmental goals, and the outcomes of decision-making.
