This page contains a number of tabs. The three most important tabs are Devices, Licenses and Management. The devices tab, as described previously, allows you to see a list of all devices that are connected to the nodegrid, and the order in which they appear in the list. The Licenses tab contains all the information regarding licenses on the nodegrid. The management tab contains a list of all nodes, which includes information such as the device, configuration, vendor, location, etc. You can configure the nodegrid with software and perform any other tasks in the management tab. The R-4 Serial Console has the option to delete the access point. This will delete the AP from the NodeGrid R-4, but you will still be able to remotely control the NodeGrid through the console. To delete the AP from the console view, simply select the checkbox next to the AP and click the Delete button. This will delete the access point from the console view. You will see an alert message as shown below: The NodeGrid R-4 Serial Console is the most popular console in the NodeGrid family of console products. It provides for access to all devices on a NodeGrid using the standard Telnet protocol. It features 1 x USB 3.0 port and two RJ45 ports for console and console management. You can select the module type of your NodeGrid using the dropdown on the left side of the top left pane. This brings up a list of all the modules offered in the R Series. A NodeGrid without the NodeGrid R-4 Serial Console has only the System Module and the Application Module. The System Module is responsible for handling the configuration, shutdown, reboot and updates of the nodegrid. The Application Module is responsible for running processes and applications installed on the nodegrid. The Application Module has a limited amount of space. Typically, the Application Module is used for users, their applications, etc.
