

7 July 2007 - Which of Eaglesoft's two additional cessna planes is better. CJ1 or Citation II (slowtation eheh)? These planes have almost the same landing gear with the same flap layout on the struts. The difference is that the CJ1 has a lighter construction. It has less effort and more comfort. But this is not as important as the landing gear. The CJ1 has a landing gear with single wheels and the Cessna is on twin wheels. If the plane is to take off and then turn around, the front wheel will push the plane forward. This means that the front wheel, which should be turned back, will push to the side.
