the browse panel will be divided into two tabs:

recent, and total. the browse button is located on the left side of the browse panel which will activate the browse tabs. you will be asked to select the type of video you wish to view: recent or total. remember that if youre viewing the browse panel for the first time, you will need to select either recent or total. once youve selected a video, you will then see three panels: source, output and setting. the source panel will display the media your video came from, whether that be a video link, video on youtube, or rss feed. the output panel will list the outputs format, you can either accept the default format or select your preferred one. although most of the outputs are compatible with the default preset, you can also modify the presets if your video isnt working out. the settings panel will display the rest of the settings such as resolution, frame rate, and aspect ratio. this is not very helpful but it gives users an option when they have no idea how to modify the video. once youve decided on your preset, you can either press download or download now. you will then be asked to select a quality mode, resolution, and frame rate. theres also an option to choose between a constant bit rate or maximum bit rate. when you download kastor all video downloader, you will see a list of available formats. you will most likely see m2v, mov and mpeg either on the left, right or bottom of the panel depending on your browser. once you click the download option, you will be given options to download the video in mp3, flv, flv2, mpeg, wmv, avi, mp4, 3gp, and swf. you will have the option to save the video on your computer or flash drive.
