on the other hand, not all companies are so diligent about protecting user data. in the latest hacking reports, the security & exchange commission (sec) announced over 100 reports of weaknesses that internet service providers (isps) have on their networks that could put millions of users at risk. the bad news for vpn users is that any device that can connect to the internet can access your internet data. and with vpns slowing internet speeds, your internet service provider should be your first line of defense. vpns also typically overwork their servers, which can slow the internet down and even raise the costs. if you notice the openvpn service level agreements that private internet access has on its website, youll see that it has put a lot of work into keeping its servers online. vpns like private internet access have been improving server performance for almost 15 years, and that has greatly improved performance. now, however, even the fastest vpns can cause a bit of a speed drop because they are so dedicated to protecting your data. some vpns arent able to get and keep a good speeds for users. while ipsec is more secure than a vpn, other vpns have slow speeds. the problem is that most vpns use the openvpn protocol, which can be very resource-heavy. this translates to a slow or choppy video stream. you can access the free vpn cloud, but doing so puts a stress on the servers and could cause problems if youre using a vpn in a limited location. when you sign up for a free service like the cloud vpn, youre given a limited amount of free bandwidth. that means you need to unblock netflix or other streaming sites so you can access your personal content. if you break your quota, youll lose your internet access until you pay for a pass that comes with unlimited bandwidth. 5ec8ef588b
