A case is described of skin lesions and oral disease with a papillomatous appearance in a koi caused by a papillomavirus antigenically indistinguishable from common types of human papilloma viruses (HPV). The gross lesions, which appeared as dermal papillomas on the skin and as warty papillomas on the oral mucosa, were found to be caused by the integration of a koi papillomavirus into the host DNA. Our findings are in agreement with those of recent reports of cutaneous and oral papillomas in a koi pond previously studied by our group.Q: System.NullReferenceException - when casting a variable in the CustomValidator control In my web app I have a few inputs that are re-validated everytime the user enters some information in the fields. For example, if the user wants to enter "Foo" and presses Enter I want to get the text value that is stored in an HiddenField. The system works fine when I leave the CustomValidator to the default action OnServerValidate: 'If IsPostBack Then If CustomValidator1.IsValid Then ' 'some code that removes the values from the HiddenField ' End If End If I need to show a custom message in the div where the input was entered. For this I override OnClientValidate to call the function: Function ValidateInput(ByVal element As HtmlElement, ByVal error As String) As ValidationResult If element. Value Is Nothing Then error = "The input you entered was empty" ValidateInput = ValidationResult.Error Dim hiddenValue As String = HttpUtility.HtmlDecode(element.Element("hiddenValue")).Trim() 'Get the hidden input field Dim hiddenElement
