The program is a great tool for processing video clips. The one particular that struck me first is that the program also includes a feature to simulate straightening and zooming. Lightroom is still recognized as an easy and user-friendly program, despite the addition of quite a few new tools. It still offers a fair bit of functionality and, surprisingly, managed to incorporate many updates and various new features in just a short period of time. One example of this is the addition of the Lens Correction and Crop tool to the Library | Selection | Information panel. Another is the addition of the "Adobe Camera Raw – Adobe Lightroom" user interface to the File | Edit | Recompose tab in the Basic tab. And, new to this version, is the "Perspective" panel in the Information window. In any case, to sum up, Lightroom has done a good job of incorporating more functionality on a logical and intuitive basis. Great job, folks! Lightroom is an excellent program and I would not hesitate to recommend it to any professional working on heavy-duty editing of photos. Despite a fairly large jump from version 4 to version 5, Lightroom cannot be considered as being the most up-to-date program out there. It has a lot more room for improvement, and is probably the largest step back from the original Lightroom version 1.0. Nevertheless, Lightroom 5 is a nice improvement, and considering the small amount of time that a photo editing program spends in my computer, and the increased number of users who rely on Lightroom, it's hard to see how Lightroom 5 will not remain a popular program in the future. I would, however, not hesitate to recommend it for any professional photographer who is already comfortable with Lightroom, with the minor exceptions mentioned at the beginning.

Robots are handy. Take a look at the time it would take to set up a robot car wash. Then consider taking it one step further. An enterprising couple has constructed a robot car wash powered by an electric moped. It's got a big mouth and can fit an extra-wide car in. The eScooter just needs to be wide enough to fit between the car and the wall. No words are needed to get your vehicle clean, or perhaps clean it better than the professionals. It only takes a few seconds to get your car looking like it has just rolled off the lot. The eScooter comes with a cleaning robot and a mop and a hose. When you're done cleaning you can use the built in charging station to top it all off.
