Version 1.0 has been released!Q: How to assign an array or IEnumerable of strings in lambda expression to a List In my current application, I have a property (let's call it MyClass) that has an internal field (called Values) that is an IEnumerable. When I set the Values property, I want to capture the setting using a lambda expression and then update the collection in the class (or all objects of that type) to be the specified collection. I know that the array or IEnumerable of strings is not a constructor so cannot be assigned to it's self. So how can I do this? A: IEnumerable can be initialized using its constructor: `var values = new[] { "value1", "value2" }; var myClass = new MyClass { Values = values };` However, the variable will still contain an empty IEnumerable.
