Download Monitor Off Utility now from Softonic: the Roman Catholic Church refuses to hold its pedophile priests accountable for their actions, it is now being sued by victims of its heinous crimes. And one such case is the one that has just been won. Nearly a decade ago, the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania ruled that the Philadelphia Archdiocese must pay up to $39 million to the survivors of a little boy who was abused by the now-deceased Rev. Edward Avery. Those survivors include the child who is now in his early 20s. He had been abused when he was a small boy by Avery, who the court said had “seduced the plaintiff into sexual activities by the plaintiff’s then-boyfriend.” The abuse included kissing, fondling and attempted sodomy, according to the court. In June, Judge William H. Yohn Jr. ruled that the archdiocese must pay $25 million to the boy. Archdiocese spokeswoman Maureen Schafer
