The newly released Adobe Photoshop updates are being introduced to the public via an update release to the desktop software version. The cloud versions of Photoshop Elements and Photoshop CC will begin rolling out to users later this month. Filling the gap between desktop and mobile editing, the Photoshop desktop app features a new browser-enabled experience. The browser-enabled features help users easily design, work, and iterate on projects with a team in other spaces. For example, the new Split View, Share for Review and ability to comment on one another's projects increases collaboration and efficiency after a phone call or FaceTime chat. To speed up the creative workflow, Adobe is introducing new workflow enhancements, including a streamlined addition of adjustments and previews for editing in the browser. It includes Auto-Tone, Fill and Reduce Projection, plus a new adjustment manager for easier, more efficient adjustments. With the new browser (Today), changes made in Photoshop directly reflect on the device, so users can preview these edits in real time, save time and resume the edits and dialogs in Photoshop. "By working seamlessly across desktop and mobile, people are able to edit, collaborate and design with greater efficiency by staying focused on the creative process where it really matters," said Paul Silla, vice president of Creative Cloud. "With the browser unveiled at MAX, customers will now be able to collaborate with a team on a project from any other device in real time - helping them to work smarter and faster, wherever they are."

The new love-it or hate-it tool is a new adjustment brush which is used by many designers. When you are working on a photo with lots of shadows, this tool is really helpful to remove unnecessary distractions and give the photo a dramatic effect. Thanks to the cloud storage, you can store important files and your designs securely and safely. The Photoshop 29 features lots of improvements in this aspect. Advanced search and find functions further enhance your design capabilities. Although it is a separate addition to Photoshop, the new version of Photoshop on the web makes it easy to create and edit video and audio. You can record a video from your webcam and edit it, as well as add your own audio and music. Powerful features include the latest working in new versions (Adobe mentions them as Sidecar which is officially launched for copying your drawings, or Illustrator CC). You can use the Smart Guides now, which can help you guide and place an image. Although the smart guides looks a bit sluggish and aren't used to work as much as Illustrator Smart Guides, you can toggle them on and off very easily. You can also use them to navigate and navigate while working on a large scale image.

When working with lots of large images, you can use Quick Select with Filter Quick Selection plugin. This feature is used to select multiple elements conveniently. When making change in a photo, you can go directly to edit your photo, right-click on a specific object, and choose the Effect option. Then you can change the colors, contrast, brightness, definition and the different types of filters to get the results that you want. This feature is surely going to leave your viewers captivated.
